JOSÉ ALEXANDRE FERREIRA

José Alexandre Ferreira is a Principal Investigator at the Portuguese Oncology Institute of Porto, Portugal's largest oncological center. He heads the institute's proteomics unit, leading a multidisciplinary team focused on basic and translational research at the intersection of oncology, glycobiology, and glycoengineering. His main research focus is set on elucidating the role of glycans in cancer and exploiting the cancer glycode for precise cancer detection and targeting. He is also the CEO of GlycoMatters, a startup dedicated to discovering cancer glyconeoantigens and developing vaccines. He is deeply committed to benefiting cancer patients and society at large by delivering impactful innovations.
