24-26 October 2024 | University of Aveiro, Portugal

Jointly organized by The Portuguese Biochemical Society and the University of Aveiro

ELENA BAENA-GONZÁLEZ

Elena Baena-González is an Associate Professor at the University of Oxford. Prior to that (2008-2022) she was Principal Investigator at the Gulbenkian Institute of Science (Oeiras, Portugal). She graduated in Biology from the University of Oulu (Finland) and received her PhD degree from the University of Turku (Finland). From 2002-2008 she was a postdoctoral fellow at Harvard Medical School in Boston (USA). Her work focuses on the evolutionarily conserved SnRK1/AMPK energy signaling pathway in plants, aiming to understand how nutrient signals affect the ability of plants to withstand stress and drive adequate growth and developmental decisions.
